SCREEN ACTING IN RELATION TO DANCE

27.05 - 15:00

In samenwerking met / En collaboration avec

This project has received funding from the European Union's Horizon 2020 research and innovation programme under the Marie Skłodowska-Curie grant agreement No 865505.

Pola Negri (1897-1987), a former ballet student, became a famous film star of Polish, German and American cinema. On screen, she often interpreted the role of the femme fatale, involved in seducing dance sequences.

EN Screen acting manuals for the silent cinema were usually written by men. Nonetheless, women contributed to the definition of screen acting standards, both in Europe and in the US, since the emergence of cinema and their contribution was often given through dance.

By analyzing a few film sequences, Elisa Uffreduzzi will show the importance of dance in the definition of screen acting standards during the silent era, through an international perspective, especially focusing on Pola Negri's case study.

NL Delirante bewerking van de oriëntaalse pantomime van Friedrich Freksa. Lubitsch speelt zelf de rol van de clown. Lubitsch rappelleert zijn debuut bij Max Reinhardt en adapteert hier in immense decors diens oriëntaalse fantasie. Hij herenigt de Reinhardt-acteurs en speelt zelf een gebochelde, verliefd op een danseresje.

Gerestaureerde kopie.

FR Une adaptation délirante de la pantomime orientale de Friedrich Freksa. Lubitsch y incarne un bossu amoureux d'une danseuse, dans des décors somptueux...

Copie restaurée.
